Dr Adam Quinn

MBBS, FACD

Dermatologist and Mohs Surgery

Dr Quinn trained at the Princess Alexandra Hospital, before undergoing specialty training in Dermatology through tertiary hospitals in Queensland and Victoria. In Melbourne he received specialised training in melanoma and skin cancer at the Victorian Melanoma Service and Peter MacCallum Cancer Centre - two of the largest Melanoma services in Australia. He had exposure to general paediatric clinics at the Royal Childrens Hospital as well as exposure to the largest specialised Hyperhidrosis (Sweating) and Allergic Patch Testing clinics in Victoria at the Skin and Cancer Foundation.

Dr Quinn's areas of expertise include;

- Skin Cancer
- Mohs Micrographic Surgery
- Hyperhidrosis (Sweating)
- Paediatric Dermatology
- Allergic Contact Dermatitis
- Acne and Rosacea

Dr Quinn has completed an Advanced Fellowship in Mohs Micrographic Surgery, Cutaneous Oncology, and Lasers; endorsed by the Australasian College of Dermatologists and the American College of Mohs Surgery. Mohs surgery represents a highly specialised technique used in the surgical removal of skin cancers on the head and neck, which affords an unparalleled cure rate, whilst conserving healthy tissue around the skin cancer.
